Background

The Librarian uses the main floor of the Great Library for housing his research and items he has stolen from various parts of the world. He stores stolen manual pages of previous Ruin Seekers inside of glass capsules. He stole the Swamp's gate device and connected it to a makeshift tomb as a power source. He decorates the room with green hook-tongue banners, the decoration and symbol used by the Frogs of Frog's Domain; he likely took them around the same timeframe he stole the green key from its Southern Vault.

The Librarian has written various information about the world upon 4 different chalkboards.

Swamp

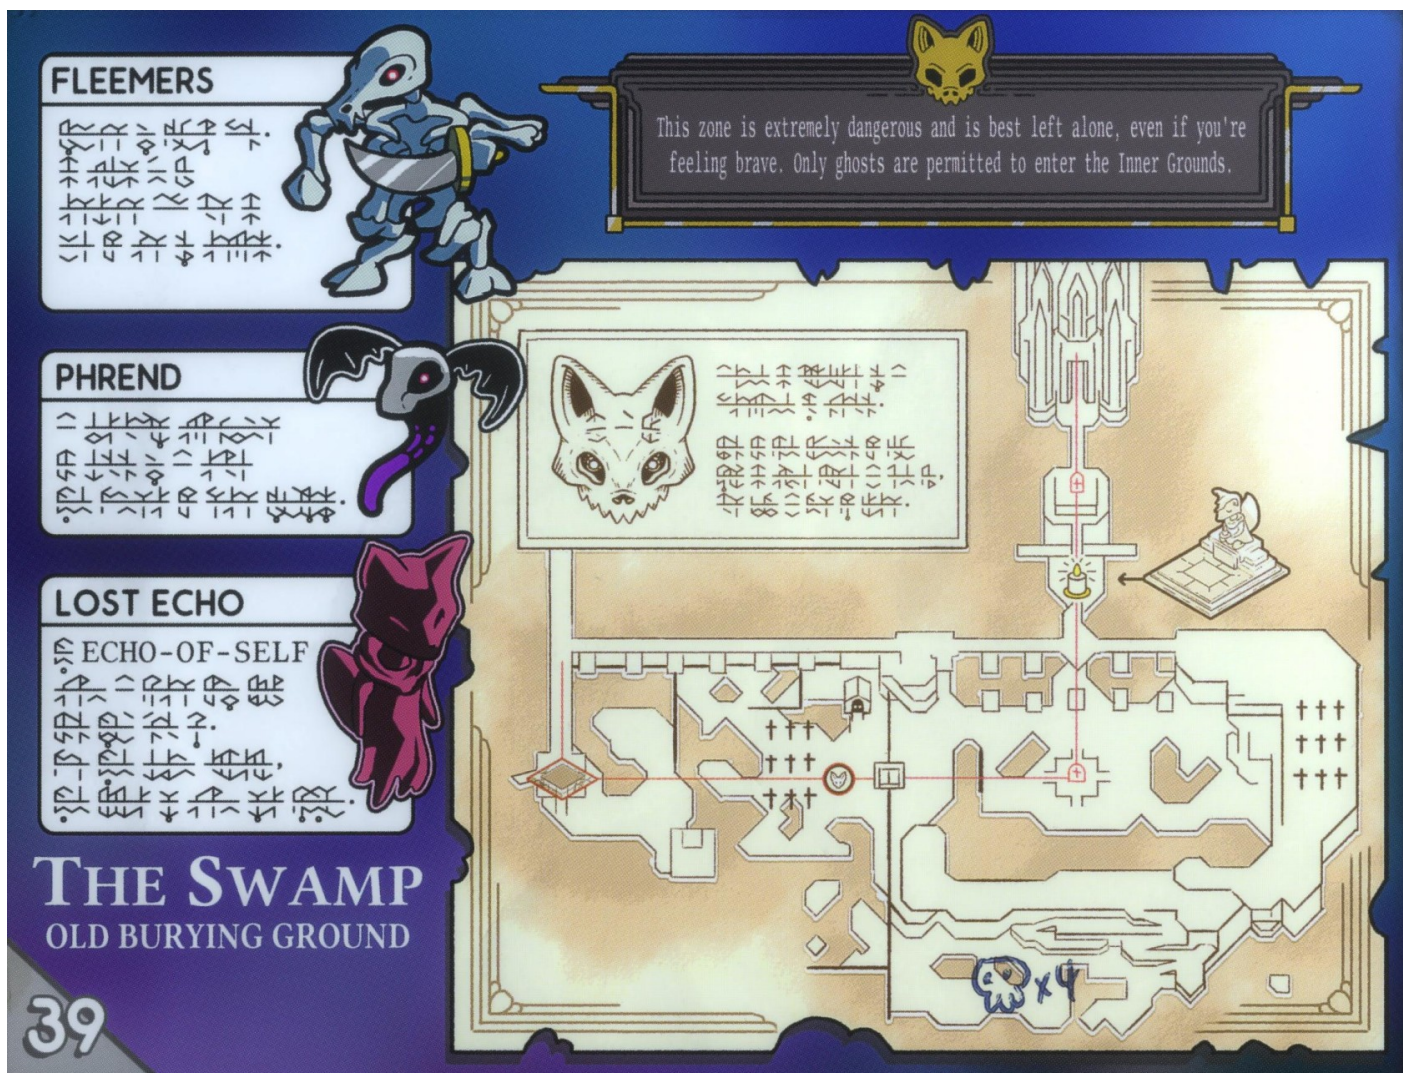

Connections	Overworld Cathedral The Far Shore Shop
Soundtrack	Ghost Field

The Swamp, also known as the Old Burying Ground, is an area to the south of the Overworld in Tunic. The wooden gate to the Inner Grounds only opens if the player is a ghost. Similarly, the Spectral Seller's crypt slightly to the northeast of the Check-Point only opens if the player is a ghost.

While typically a player must be a ghost in order to enter, or own the Hero's Laurels in order to jump over the gate while corporeal, a persistent player will find a pathway into the Inner Grounds if they walk downwards along the edge of the stone and iron gate, then into and around the waters, and then around the bottommost edge of the gate.

The Far Shore

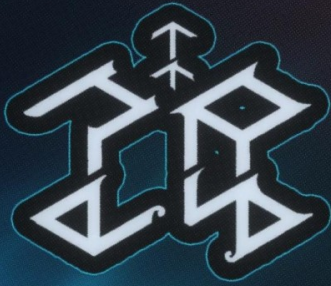

Connections	Overworld Eastern Vault Ruined Atoll Great Library Quarry Rooted Ziggurat West Garden East Forest Swamp
Soundtrack	Spirit Estuary Antipodes The Ones Who Came Before Us Infinite Wishes Soapstone Visions Ascendence Transcendence

The Far Shore is a spiritual realm in Tunic. The player arrives there upon their first death, prior to The Heir's betrayal; when they open the doors to the Sealed Temple prior to ringing the Eastern and Western Bells; and when they venerate upon strange gates or to the Hero's Graves.

The Far Shore contains The Shadow Oubliette on its north edge. South of The Shadow Oubliette are strange gates that teleport the player to the Rooted Ziggurat, the Quarry, the West Garden, the Ruined Atoll, the Sword of The Heir, the Eastern Vault, the Town Ruins of the Overworld, the Great Library, Ruin Seeker's Arrival of the Overworld, and the East Forest.

The Hero's Grave of The Far Shore is accessed by venerating to the Hero's Graves at the Eastern Vault, the East Forest, the Swamp, the Great Library, the West Garden, and the Quarry.

Background

Page 3 of the instruction manual states that an ancient civilization "ventured to The Far Shore and sought power from the spaces between." Additionally, a chalkboard in the Great Library depicts that The Librarian discovered that the world of Tunic is shaped like a game cartridge; it highly resembles an SNES cartridge.

Page 6 of the instruction manual depicts that the Canonical Plane has a bridge that leads to The Shadow Oubliette, and The Shadow Oubliette has a bridge that leads to The Far Shore. A barrier extending south of The Shadow Oubliette partitions the Canonical Plane and The Far Shore from each other, though this barrier is pierceable with the power of the red, green, and blue keys.

A oubliette is "a dungeon with an opening only at the top."
